Just see the example of magnetic presence in "Charisma University" for yourself and you'll immediately understand what I mean: To be fair, Charlie Houpert does say that you can be magnetic with lower energy. But most of his examples are high-energy. Beginners who try to focus on the steps to hit one after the other might get stuck in their own head and end up being even more confused. In my opinion, Charisma University is a better fit for people who want to acquire a more lively, "bouncing off the wall" type of personality. I want to know if the course is worth it (as it is quite expensive) Has anyone tried it? See Power University here: See for example the 7 archetypes of dominance, and you will see that one can be dominant and high-status in totally different ways. Charlie Communicates Super Clearly Charlie could be dubbed the "explainer" in command". Sometimes High-Energy & Reactions Over Results As a rule of thumb: High-energy folks tend to get more good reactions. But higher power folks tend to get more results. I like the idea of forming a strong "social foundation" before you show interest. And, unless you're going for a jester style of social dominance, this is far from powerful. Stories about yourself serve the purpose of giving you credibility or of making the audience like you and respect you. There is indeed power in vulnerability. And yet he was disempowered, publicly shamed, and potentially manipulated by his cheating ex-wife. To me that type of charisma is useless. Charisma is slightly different than power though, so I convene that there is more overlap between and women. The leadership module is mostly one type of leadership: inspirational leadership. However, I am not a big fan of segmenting socialization into pre-defined "steps" that one must hit for success - it reminds me of The Mystery Method in seduction. Reality is complex and all components co-exist and overlap. Is Charisma University Worth It? If you are rich and powerful you can be a jerk and you don't need to be physically attractive and people will still flock to you. Examples of First Impressions I love the format of showing examples. We tried to focus on the one that we decided to personality Ben then says that charisma / personality is the quickest to change. But I disagree. There is obviously much overlap between charisma and power. Yet, we can draw a demarcation line between power and charisma. Your password reset link appears to be invalid or expired. 5. But that's hardly more charismatic and definitely not powerful. I haven't found many reviews, the only one I found is from a guy named kylentch, and I think its review is not honest, as he didnt make any criticism to the course. Page 22 22 comments Introversion is a relevant subject when discussing Charisma University and Charlie's approach. Of course Charisma University is legit, is there any good or bad characteristics that you can think of? Plus, they also feel higher power, and in control. And it's let's effective than power. Obama comes across as haughty, distant and rude. But, a good course can give you the knowledge and theoretical foundation. And gives you advice on what to work on. That's a lot, actually. The tragic stories are slower and have lots of pauses to let the emotions sink in. The happy and fun stories are fast-paced and punctuated by laughter and different and rising voice tonalities. Jennifer Lawrence & Charismatic Vulnerability Charlie makes the point in Charisma University that revealing a weakness early makes you likable and charismatic. See an example on Charisma University sales page: When women get too touchy, they might like you, but they more often like you as a friend. Early interest might otherwise seem phony or might even be unwanted. Also read: The Myth of High Energy Socializing Same tactics for both men and women? Storytelling is one of my weaknesses and I learned a lot here. And finally, for me personally, as a more advanced student of human nature, I was seeking and expecting a bit more refinement and depth, and that takes it to 3 stars. However, frankly, I really didn't like the examples of first impressions in Charisma University. Here they are: This should be the example of a charismatic way of dealing with people: To me this not an example of a gregarious or charismatic man. Leadership This is the module I probably enjoyed the least. Example of Great Conversation Again I have to disagree with what Charlie presents as "charismatic". Yet, given how important they are, I think they deserved more space than what they actually got. After all, that's what often makes the biggest difference for beginners: the fundamentals. It's not about changing your nature, but finding the strengths in the style that more closely match their nature. As we will see, what he recommends is the extrovert, high-energy approach to socialization - the far end of extroversion-. Magnetic presence For magnetic presence comfort, confidence and power are crucial, says Charlie Houpert. In the beginning when Power University wasn't differentiating between men and women a female student wrote this to me: And I had to agree: I couldn't provide the same advice for men and women. A guy who's already been into self-development for a while, with an average income, OK social skills, and who doesn't like the "over the top style"... You will have to answer for yourself. BUT... They offer a money-back guarantee. And the rest is about how to better understand people which is basically a summary of Tony Robbins' Creating Lasting Change. Is Charisma University Legit? To give you an example: Of course they are all right. And they are all wrong in the sense that each system has its own limitation. Back to leadership: Leadership 101 How to be a leader Leadership power dynamics How to Be A Leader: 13 Laws From Social-Psychology CONS I enjoyed Charisma University, and these are the cons for how I see social skills: Power Beats Charisma (Charlie Admitted) Ultimately, my main "con" comes down to this. It seems like Charlie Houpert teaches Charlie Houpert's path to charisma. Like researcher Elaine Aron says: most social skills courses and books are sold by high-energy extroverts, who teach the high-energy extrovert way to social skills. But that might not be the best solution for everyone. He even mentions that Marlon Brando's magnetic low energy charisma works only because it's scripted. Could Be Deeper on Some Crucial Aspects of Social Skills Charlie touches upon some of the basics of posture, voice, and clothing.
